A monkey loved a fish. All day, he sat beside his tree and watched the fish in her pond.

Sometimes the fish jumped up, out of the water. The monkey thought, "She cannot breathe well in the pond! Water is hard to breathe in! I'll help her!"

So, he pulled her out of the water. Then he put the fish under his tree. "You have air to breathe here!" he said to her. "No!" said the fish. "I'll die here! Put me back in my pond! I jump out of water when I feel good."

Of course, the fish soon died. Her death made the monkey sad. The monkey learned a lesson. You need to see things from other people's point of view.
