Exercise B

Last weekend my younger brother lent his friend, Tom, a new computer game called Sky Gazer. It was mine! My aunt had given it to me for my birthday. He said he just wanted to show Tom the game and that he was going to return it. Unfortunately, he left the game at Tom's house. And Tom lent it to another friend. That friend didn't return it to Tom. My brother gave me his promise that he would get it back. I wanted to teach my brother a lesson. I told him that he owed me a new game and that he must give his pocket money to me. So, he did. Then, this morning the postman arrived with a parcel for me. Inside was my game and a letter. I showed the letter to my brother. Tom was sick and couldn't leave the house so his parents had sent the game back. I was sorry for Tom but happy to have my game back. And, of course, my brother was happy when I gave him his pocket money back!

Exercise C

On my birthday we always do the same things. First of all, at breakfast everyone wishes me 'Happy Birthday!'

Then my mother gives me my birthday cards. This year my grandparents sent some money to me in the card. I pass the cards to my mother and she puts them on the shelf. Next, I open my presents. This year my parents gave me a new watch and my big brother bought me a box of paints. I promised to paint him a picture. After that, the family sang 'Happy Birthday' to me and we all ate breakfast.

In the afternoon my friends came round for tea and I showed them my presents and cards. In the evening I wrote my thank-you letters. I wrote my grandparents a letter and thanked them for the money and told them about my day.
